Transforming schools into innovative learning organisations

EDEN Open Classroom Conference, Athens

Hosted by Open Discovery Space, DigiSkills and Greenet

18-21 September 2015, Athens, Greece

In collaboration with: Ellinogermaniki Agogi

How can the progressive academic and professional European community contribute to the better understanding, development and exploitation of the educational landscape in 2015? The Conference is striving to bring together teachers and trainers from various levels of education to learn from each other. This event is free of charge, no registration fee will be charged, however online registration is necessary.

The exploration of what makes school education innovative will be enhanced by practical activities demonstrating and demystifying those 21st century teacher skills and competences that are so often regarded as essential but intimidating. This free event will showcase and celebrate the excellence of "change agents" from all over Europe who – having been involved with EU projects like ODS and DigiSkills – developed and improved their digital skills and competences by participating in online trainings and face to face summer schools, workshops and competitions. All teachers yet novice to these innovative projects will be able to learn from these inspirational best practices and exploit the active community members' experiences and achievements.

How to contribute – Call for Submissions

The conference approach and themes imply openness in choosing the topics and applying interactive session formats. We welcome papers presenting project concepts as well as research findings related to the links between learning, ICTs, innovation and the Transforming Schools topics. Submissions addressing one or more of the conference themes are welcome in either standard paper or Synergy formats.

The deadline for submission is 15 July for papers and 15 August for Synergy formats.

During the 3 days you will be able to benefit from professional development opportunities by participating in a selection of the projects' most popular trainings and webinars in a face to face setting, while the Scholarly Contributions Day of the programme will offer strands of paper presentations and Synergy sessions where you are invited to introduce your own research and validated practice to your peers.
